Excerpt: .a festival in a neighbouring village. - (1) Such was the conduct of Catholic Chinese, not in the sea-port towns, but in the very heart of the empire. Mr Smith, to whom we must once more return, saw other - visitors - at Amoy, who consorted with his colleagues, but had not yet shown any decided. proof of a charge of heart. - They had - ceased to worship idols, - at least they said so, but they had not yet generally adopted the decided course of expelling the image from their household. - And accordingly, when Mr Smith told a Chinese that one Ta-laou-yay - had put away his idols, - the former - called him an old hypocrite, and asserted, that if we could gain admission into the interior of the house, he doubted not that we should find the idols in some...
